

Keynote

Louisiana Prize Fest

Gregory Kallenberg has mastered the Zen art of bocci ball, been detained for protesting non-alcoholic tequila and is the founder of Louisiana Film Prize.

He moved to Shreveport from Austin to make his film “Haynesville”. He not only decided to make Shreveport his home, more importantly, he has taken on the task of building an indigenous film community in northwest Louisiana.

Gregory is the founder and executive director of the Louisiana Startup, Film, Food and Music Prizes. As of 2019, the award-winning Louisiana Film Prize has contributed over $12 million in economic development for the Shreveport/Bossier area and created a beacon to attract creative talent to Northwest Louisiana.

To the Film Prize, Kallenberg is caring mother, stern father, needy uncle and eccentric aunt. Prior to filmmaking, he wrote for Esquire, The New York Times, Texas Monthly, Austin American Statesman’s XL magazine and other publications.

Gregory attended the University of Texas and received his B.S. in film. He also attended the film program at the University of Southern California. Prior to his breakout documentary Haynesville: A Nation’s Hunt for an Energy Future, Gregory directed Eating Levi, an internationally successful film about Levi Oliver and his quest for competitive eating fame.

The Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities in partnership with Lt. Gov. Billy Nungesser, selected Kallenberg as the 2019 Louisiana Champion of Culture.
