Stafford Hall's friendly face and casual demeanor about all things business are merely a decoy. There is no one else you want on your side for a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity or defending you in a crisis.

Stafford is a deadly combination of strategic brains, mystical intuition, humor and corporate marketing intelligence. As founder of Covalent Logic, a corporate communications firm in Baton Rouge, Stafford leads a team of 30 communications professionals to serve global and local clients like Shell Chemical, Hilton Worldwide and the Office of the Governor with internal communications, graphic design, web development and public relations.

Her background includes being an Accredited Public Relations professional, former webmaster for the Governor, Cyber-cop at AOL and (obviously totally related) expert in pre-Renaissance Eastern European History.

She has earned the Junior Achievement and Baton Rouge Business Report's Young Business Person of the Year and earned her firm the US Chamber's Blue Ribbon Award.

As a Senior Practitioner in the Southern Public Relations Federation, she has received two lifetime achievement awards from the American Advertising Federation and the Public Relations Association of Louisiana.
